

Tips on how to raise children

There are a few things that we can all do to help the kids of the future:

- 1. We must remember that our personal life experience is not the truth, but rather our truth, based on the sum of our life experience and all the propaganda that we have embraced as true. The greatest thing we can do for the next generation is to teach them the folly of conformity. They already have lying dormant in them the wisdom and power to do anything that they dare to dream. They will never escape from the mediocrity of this world until they learn to think for themselves, commit their thoughts to action and grow into the person who is prepared to accept total responsibility for the consequences.
- 2. Our job is not to protect them, but to encourage them to gain as much experience as possible in the shortest possible space of time while allowing them to develop all the possibilities of their own, incredible, imaginations.
- 3. Something else to think about, there is no age restriction on common sense. In my experience of training children, I have found that if they are given the opportunity to be exposed to the principles of exceptional performance, they usually rise to the occasion quicker and more effectively than adults. Don't underestimate the next generation!

David Pickard Wyllie